1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 I. INTRODUCTION

3 This lawsuit is filed in the wrong court by serial litigants and is without merit. The 4 Complaint should be dismissed because Plaintiffs fail to allege an injury-in-fact sufficient to 5 confer Article III standing stemming from their brief interactions with www.hilton.com (the 6 “Website”). The Complaint should also be dismissed because there is no basis for either general 7 or specific personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings for Plaintiffs’ alleged wrongs. Hilton 8 Holdings is a holding company that is not registered to do business in California. Subject matter 9 jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction are threshold issues. See Sinochem Int’l Co. v. Malaysia
10 Int’l Shipping Corp., 549 U.S. 422, 430 (2007). The Court may consider either jurisdictional 11 challenge first, but the result is fatal: the Complaint should be dismissed, and the Court need not 12 proceed to the merits of the claims. See id. at 423 (“[A] federal court generally may not rule on 13 the merits of a case without first determining that it has jurisdiction.”). The Court’s analysis 14 should end here, but the Complaint also fails to plausibly state a single claim for relief.

15 Plaintiffs allege that in 2023 and 2024, they visited the Website “to browse information 16 about Hilton’s hotels and resorts.” Compl. ¶¶ 75, 83, 91. The crux of Plaintiffs’ allegations is 17 that, upon visiting the Website, they were presented with a cookie banner that allowed them to 18 “Opt Out” of certain common website cookies, but certain cookies were not disabled and 19 transmitted data to third parties. See id. ¶¶ 25, 76-77, 84-85, 92-93. Absent from Plaintiffs’ 20 Complaint is any allegation that Hilton Holdings intended this malfunction—or that it actually 21 caused Plaintiffs’ private information to be collected or disclosed to third parties. Accordingly, 22 Plaintiffs’ sprawling Complaint, alleging everything from fraud to wiretapping, should be 23 dismissed for multiple, independent reasons:

24 First, Plaintiffs fail to allege they suffered an actual injury-in-fact sufficient to confer 25 Article III standing because they do not clearly allege any of their personal information was 26 actually collected or disclosed or that they were injured by any alleged disclosure.

27 Second, there is no basis to exercise general or specific personal jurisdiction over Hilton 28 Holdings stemming from Plaintiffs’ brief Website visits, because Hilton Holdings is a Delaware entity headquartered in Virginia, and a holding company that is not registered to do business in California. Further, the Complaint fails to allege Hilton Holdings expressly targets Californians.

Third, Plaintiffs’ invasion of privacy and intrusion upon seclusion claims fail to allege any intentional or “highly offensive” conduct.

Fourth, Plaintiffs’ CIPA claims fail because they do not allege Hilton Holdings or any third party intended to commit an unlawful “wiretap” and Plaintiffs’ expressly plead themselves out of their novel “pen register” theory by alleging the cookies can generally capture “some” data elements that can be “contents” of communications.

Fifth, Plaintiffs’ claims for fraud, breach of contract, and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing fail to allege damages, their equitable claims and remedies are foreclosed because money damages are adequate, their unjust enrichment claim is duplicative of the contract claim, their breach of implied covenant claim is superfluous, and they fail to plead the requisite knowledge or intent to support their fraud claim to satisfy Rule 9(b).

Sixth, Plaintiffs’ trespass to chattels claim fails because Plaintiffs do not allege intentional conduct or a significant interference with their devices.

For each of these reasons, the Complaint should be dismissed with prejudice.

II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. The Hilton.com Website

Hilton Holdings “is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters and principal place of business in McClean, Virginia.” Compl. ¶ 9. It is the ultimate parent of a global hospitality enterprise. See id. ¶ 22. According to the Complaint, Hilton Holdings “owns and operates” the Website, which visitors may use to make hotel reservations and browse information about Hilton hotels. See id. ¶ 22. The Website contains first and third-party cookies (see id. ¶ 23) and had a cookie banner (the “Cookie Banner”), which immediately displayed when a visitor navigated to the Website. See id. ¶ 25. The Cookie Banner informed visitors that the Website contains “cookies and similar technologies,” provides a link to the Hilton Global Privacy Statement, and also provides a “Do Not Sell My Personal Information” link. Id. The Cookie Banner allowed visitors to select an “Opt Out” button to “opt out of cookies and similar technologies” identified

1 in the Hilton Global Privacy Statement, which describes how information is collected from the 2 use of the Website and shared with third parties. See id. ¶ 1, n.1.

3 B. Plaintiffs’ Interactions with Hilton.com

4 Plaintiffs allege they visited the Website in either 2023 or 2024 “to browse information 5 about Hilton’s hotels and resorts.” Compl. ¶¶ 75, 83, 91. Plaintiffs do not allege they booked 6 reservations, searched for specific properties, entered information into form fields, or interacted 7 with the Website in a particular way. See generally id. On the Website, Plaintiffs claim they 8 encountered the Cookie Banner and selected the “Opt Out” button on the Cookie Banner. See id.
9 ¶¶ 76-77, 84-85, 92-93. Plaintiffs allege that despite clicking the “Opt Out” button, third-party 10 tracking technology, such as cookies, continued to function on Plaintiffs’ devices. See id. ¶¶ 80, 11 88, 96. The Complaint claims that as a result, Plaintiffs’ “private” communications with the 12 Website were intercepted by and disclosed to the third-party cookie providers. Plaintiffs do not 13 allege the nature of their “private” communications or that any Plaintiff took any substantive 14 actions on the Website beyond interacting with the Cookie Banner. See id. ¶¶ 80, 88, 96.
15 Plaintiffs also do not allege that Hilton Holdings intentionally configured the Cookie Banner to 16 malfunction, or that tracking occurred other than due to a good faith error. See generally *id.*¹

17 III. ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

- 18 A. Have Plaintiffs sufficiently pled injury-in-fact to establish Article III standing?
19 B. Have Plaintiffs sufficiently pled personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings?
20 C. Have Plaintiffs sufficiently stated claims for: (1) invasion of privacy; (2) intrusion 21 upon seclusion; (3) wiretapping in violation of CIPA § 631; (4) use of a pen register 22 in violation of CIPA § 638.51; (5) fraud, deceit, and/or misrepresentation; (6) unjust 23 enrichment (7) breach of contract; (8) breach of the implied covenant for good faith 24 and fair dealings; and (9) trespass to chattels?

26 ¹ Every Hilton Honors member agrees to the Hilton Honors Terms & Conditions and Hilton Site 27 Usage Agreement, which contain, among other terms, a forum-selection clause specifying all 28 lawsuits must be filed in the Eastern District of Virginia and a class-action waiver. Based on the information in the Complaint, Hilton is presently not able to confirm whether Plaintiffs are subject to these agreements but reserves all rights.

1 IV. LEGAL STANDARDS

2 A. Rule 12(b)(1): Standing

3 A complaint should be dismissed if the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction due to a 4 plaintiff's lack of Article III standing. White v. Lee, 227 F.3d 1214, 1242 (9th Cir. 2000); see also 5 Maya v. Centex Corp., 658 F.3d 1060, 1067 (9th Cir. 2011). “[T]o satisfy Article III’s standing 6 requirements, a plaintiff must show (1) it has suffered an ‘injury in fact’ that is (a) concrete and 7 particularized and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical; (2) the injury is fairly 8 traceable to the challenged action of the defendant; and (3) it is likely, as opposed to merely 9 speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.” Cedar Park Assembly of 10 God of Kirkland, Washington v. Kreidler, 2025 WL 716341, at *5 (9th Cir. Mar. 6, 2025) (quoting 11 Jones v. L.A. Cent. Plaza LLC, 74 F.4th 1053, 1057 (9th Cir. 2023)). The plaintiff, as “[t]he party 12 invoking federal jurisdiction[,] bears the burden of establishing these elements.” Lujan v.
13 Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561 (1992).

14 B. Rule 12(b)(2): Personal Jurisdiction

15 “[P]ersonal jurisdiction refers to a court’s power over a particular defendant[.]” Voltage
16 Pictures, LLC v. Gussi S.A. de CV, 92 F.4th 815, 824 (9th Cir. 2024). “Where a defendant moves 17 to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff bears the burden of 18 demonstrating that jurisdiction is appropriate.” Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 19 F.3d 797, 800 (9th Cir. 2004). “[M]ere ‘bare bones’ assertions of minimum contacts with the 20 forum or legal conclusions unsupported by specific factual allegations will not satisfy a plaintiff’s 21 pleading burden.” Swartz v. KPMG LLP, 476 F.3d 756, 766 (9th Cir. 2007). “[T]he burden of 22 proof is on the plaintiff to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, a basis for jurisdiction.”
23 See Sch. Dist. of Okaloosa Cnty. v. Superior Ct., 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612, 615 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997).

24 C. Rule 12(b)(6): Failure to State a Claim

25 “A Rule 12(b)(6) motion tests the legal sufficiency of a claim.” Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 26 729, 732 (9th Cir. 2001). To survive, “a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted 27 as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 28 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). Courts do not have to

1 “accept as true allegations . . . that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or 2 unreasonable inferences.” Daniels-Hall v. National Educ. Ass’n, 629 F.3d 992, 998 (9th Cir. 2010).

3 V. PLAINTIFFS SUFFERED NO INJURY-IN-FACT AND LACK STANDING

4 The Court should dismiss the Complaint because Plaintiffs lack Article III standing.
5 Plaintiffs allege two theories of harm: (i) a privacy interest in the information they provided on 6 the Website, and (ii) diminishment of the value of their information. Neither amount to an injury-7 in-fact sufficient to supply Article III standing.

8 A plaintiff does not “automatically satisf[y] the injury-in-fact requirement whenever a 9 statute grants a person a statutory right and purports to authorize that person to sue to vindicate 10 that right.” Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 331 (2016), as revised (May 24, 2016). Rather, 11 “[a] plaintiff establishes an injury in fact when she shows that she suffered ‘an invasion of a 12 legally protected interest’ that is ‘concrete and particularized.’” Heiting v. FKA Distributing Co., 13 2025 WL 736594, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2025) (quoting Spokeo, 578 U.S. at 339).

14 No Alleged Collection or Disclosure of Plaintiffs’ Personal Information: “[S]ince this is 15 a class action, at least one of the named plaintiffs must have suffered an injury in fact.” In re 16 Facebook Internet Tracking Litig., 140 F. Supp. 3d 922, 930 (N.D. Cal. 2015). While the 17 Complaint defines a series of data elements as “Private Communications” that may be disclosed 18 through cookies by Website users at large, Compl. ¶¶ 3, 22, 29, 33, 114, 144, 176, the Complaint 19 does not allege that Plaintiffs themselves entered any personal information on the Website or 20 took any action on the Website other than merely “brows[ing for] information about Hilton’s 21 hotels and resorts.” See Compl. ¶¶ 75, 83, 91. Plaintiffs do not allege they provided any private 22 information to Hilton through their interactions with the Website. Because there was no collection 23 of private information, Plaintiffs cannot, and do not, allege the disclosure of private information.

24 In website “wiretapping” and similar cases, courts routinely hold plaintiffs lack Article III 25 standing where, as here, plaintiffs fail to identify the personal information they entered on a 26 defendant’s website or whether the defendant actually collected the plaintiff’s personal 27 information. See, e.g., Mikulsky v. Noom, Inc. 682 F. Supp. 3d 855, 864-65 (S.D. Cal. 2023) 28 (collecting cases).

1 In Mikulsky, the plaintiff alleged a website operator used “session replay” software to “track 2 and analyze website user interactions,” capturing “mouse movements” and user generated 3 information entered into form fields, the URLs of webpages visited, and other electronic 4 communications. Id. at 860. The plaintiff alleged this software captured her “personal 5 information” through details she entered into form fields on the website. Id. Nonetheless, the 6 court concluded the plaintiff lacked standing. Id. at 865. The court reasoned that the plaintiff’s 7 failure to specify what “personal information” the plaintiff inputted on the website was fatal to 8 alleging an injury-in-fact because the plaintiff’s conclusory allegations did not allow the court to 9 determine whether the information bore “a close relationship to harms traditionally recognized as 10 providing a basis for lawsuits in American courts.” See id. at 864-65; see also In re BPS Direct, 11 LLC, 705 F. Supp. 3d 333, 350-51 (E.D. Pa. 2023) (“[T]he mere fact Website Users allege [the 12 defendants] intercepted electronic communications does not confer standing . . . [e]ven if the type 13 of harm a statute is designed to protect resembles a type of harm traditionally protected, we cannot 14 find harm where there is none.”).

15 As Plaintiffs should know from their other litigation forays, the same result follows here.
16 The Complaint does not allege Hilton Holdings collected Plaintiffs’ “Private Communications” 17 or that Hilton or third parties obtained any information about them through their limited use of 18 the Website. Instead, Plaintiffs allege only an illusory harm based on a series of hypothetical and 19 generalized allegations—the opposite of “concrete” and “particularized.” TransUnion LLC v.
20 Ramirez, 594 U.S. 413, 423 (2021). “As Plaintiff[s] do] not clearly allege what personalized 21 information of [theirs] was actually collected, [they] do[] not identify any harm to [their] privacy” 22 and fail to establish standing. Hughes v. Vivint, Inc., 2024 WL 5179916, at *5 (C.D. Cal. July 12, 23 2024), adopted, 2024 WL 5179917 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2024); see also Gabrielli v. Insider, Inc., 24 2025 WL 522515, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 2025) (dismissing CIPA claims brought by Plaintiff 25 Gabrielli for failure to allege an injury-in-fact); Saeedy, et al. v. Microsoft Corp., 2023 WL 26 8828852, at *7 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 21, 2023) (dismissing CIPA, invasion of privacy, and similar 27 claims brought by Plaintiff Shah for failure to allege injury-in-fact).

28 /////

1 No Diminution in Value: The Complaint summarily alleges “Plaintiffs and Class members 2 have also suffered harm in the form of diminution of the value of their private and personally 3 identifiable information and communications.” Compl. ¶ 167. This ignores that “[c]ourts have 4 routinely rejected the proposition that an individual’s personal identifying information has an 5 independent monetary value.” Welborn v. IRS, 218 F. Supp. 3d 64, 78 (D.D.C. 2016) (collecting 6 cases); see also In re Facebook Internet Tracking Litig., 140 F. Supp. 3d at 930 (“When confronted 7 with data privacy claims similar to the ones brought by Plaintiffs, courts have found insufficient 8 for standing purposes generalized assertions of economic harm based solely on the alleged value 9 of personal information.”); Saeedy, 2023 WL 8828852, at *7 (noting Plaintiff Shah and co- 10 Plaintiffs failed to allege “they provided their data in a transaction in which they were not paid 11 the fair value for the data provided.”).

12 Here, the Complaint makes only generalized allegations about the value of certain data. See 13 Compl. ¶¶ 70-73. None of the Plaintiffs plausibly allege “that they personally lost the opportunity 14 to sell their information or that the value of their information was somehow diminished after it was 15 collected by [a third party.]” In re Facebook Internet Tracking Litig., 140 F. Supp. 3d at 931-32.
16 Because Plaintiffs have not demonstrated the alleged “conduct resulted in some concrete and 17 particularized harm, they have not articulated a cognizable basis for standing pursuant to Article 18 III.” Id. at 932. Accordingly, each of Plaintiffs’ claims fail for lack of Article III standing, and 19 the Court’s analysis can and should end here.

20 VI. THE COURT LACKS PERSONAL JURISDICTION OVER HILTON HOLDINGS

21 The Complaint should independently be dismissed because Plaintiffs fail to meet their burden 22 to plead facts sufficient to demonstrate general or specific personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings.

23 No General Personal Jurisdiction: Hilton Holdings is not subject to the Court’s general 24 personal jurisdiction. General personal jurisdiction “extends to ‘any and all claims’ brought against 25 a defendant,” but only exists “when a defendant is ‘essentially at home’ in the State.” Ford Motor 26 Co. v. Montana Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct., 592 U.S. 351, 358 (2021) (quoting Goodyear Dunlop Tires 27 Operations, S.A. v. Brown, 564 U.S. 915, 919 (2011)). “The general rule is that general jurisdiction 28 is only proper over a corporation in its state of incorporation or in the state of its principal place of business.” MG Freesites Ltd. v. DISH Techs. L.L.C., 712 F. Supp. 3d 1318, 1325 (N.D. Cal. 2024). Hilton Holdings is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters and principal place of business in McLean, Virginia. Smith Decl. ¶ 3, Ex. A. It is an ultimate parent of many Hilton companies but does not itself operate hotels. See id. ¶ 4. Thus, Hilton Holdings is not registered to do business in California. See id. ¶ 5. It is therefore not “essentially at home” in California. Goodyear, 564 U.S. at 919. There is no basis to exercise of general personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings. See Dillon v. Avis Budget Grp., 2018 WL 3475529, at *4 (C.D. Cal. 2018) (finding no general jurisdiction in California for defendant even though the defendant “operate[d] so many physical rental locations” in California); Moledina v. Marriott Int’l, Inc., 635 F. Supp. 3d 941, 948 n.1 (C.D. Cal. 2022) (noting no general jurisdiction even though defendant operated numerous hospitality locations).

No Specific Personal Jurisdiction: The Court also lacks specific personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings for these claims. “District courts in California [] apply a three-part test to determine whether they can exercise specific personal jurisdiction over a defendant: (1) the non-resident defendant must purposefully direct its activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof, or perform some act by which it purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws; (2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant’s forum-related activities; and (3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice.” Nichols v. Guidetoinsure, LLC, 730 F. Supp. 3d 935, 939 (N.D. Cal. 2024) (emphasis added). Plaintiffs bear the burden of pleading the first two prongs. See Jayone Foods, Inc. v. Aekyung Indus. Co., 242 Cal. Rptr. 3d 705, 713 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019).

The Complaint fails to allege Hilton Holdings purposefully directed its operation of a globally accessible website to California. “Purposeful direction requires the defendant to have ‘(1) committed an intentional act, (2) expressly aimed at the forum state, (3) causing harm that the defendant knows is likely to be suffered in the forum state.’” Nichols, 730 F. Supp. 3d at 939 (emphasis added) (citation omitted). Plaintiffs have the burden of sufficiently pleading each prong. See Heiting v. Marriott Int’l, Inc., 743 F. Supp. 3d 1163, 1169 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2024).

1 In internet cases, the express aiming requirement is not satisfied where the complaint fails to 2 allege the defendant specifically targeted users within the forum. See AMA Multimedia, LLC v.
3 Wanat, 970 F.3d 1201, 1210-11 (9th Cir. 2020) (analyzing federal long-arm rule). When the alleged 4 harm relates to interaction with a website, the “[m]ere passive operation of a website is insufficient 5 to demonstrate express aiming.” Will Co. v. Lee, 47 F.4th 917, 922 (9th Cir. 2022); see also Herbal
6 Brands, Inc. v. Photoplaza, Inc., 72 F.4th 1085, 1091 (9th Cir. 2023), cert. denied, 144 S. Ct. 693 7 (2024) (“[O]peration of an interactive website does not, by itself, establish express aiming.”). “This 8 is so even if Defendant knows, through the data it collects and the tracking tools it uses, the 9 whereabouts of the persons who access its website.” Moore v. Carhartt, Inc., 2024 WL 1337899, at 10 *2 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 28, 2024). Instead, “something more” is required to demonstrate purposeful 11 direction. Moore, 2024 WL 1337899, at *3.

12 Here, the Complaint fails to allege the required “something more.” Plaintiffs merely allege 13 that the Website is globally accessible, that Plaintiffs could access from California, (Compl. ¶ 22), 14 and that Hilton Holdings “regularly conducts and/or solicits business in, engages in other persistent 15 courses of conduct in, and/or derives substantial revenue from products and services provided to 16 persons in the State of California.” Id. ¶ 11. While other Hilton entities may engage in business in 17 California, Hilton Holdings is a holding company that is not registered to do business in California.
18 Smith Decl. ¶ 4. Though Plaintiffs allege they visited the Website from California, (id. ¶ 147), the 19 Supreme Court has unequivocally held that is not enough to establish a court’s personal 20 jurisdiction. See Walden v. Fiore, 571 U.S. 277, 285 (2014) (“[T]he plaintiff cannot be the only 21 link between the defendant and the forum.”); see also Elliot v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 2021 WL 22 2153820, at *3 (C.D. Cal. May 25, 2021) (“[T]he fact that [d]efendant maintains an interactive 23 website that reaches potential customers in California does not establish specific jurisdiction.”).

24 The Complaint’s reference to California in Hilton’s Global Privacy Statement does not 25 change this result. See Cole-Parmer Instrument Co. LLC v. Pro. Lab’ys, Inc., 2021 WL 3053201, 26 at *6 (N.D. Cal. July 20, 2021) (“[A]s courts in this district have recognized, compliance with 27 California’s privacy policy does not by itself demonstrate that Defendant intentionally targeted 28 consumers in California.”) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Because the Complaint

1 fails to allege Hilton Holdings expressly aimed the Website to California visitors, the Court lacks 2 specific personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings, and the Motion to Dismiss should be 3 independently granted on these grounds, too. Because the Complaint fails to establish this Court’s 4 subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction over Hilton Holdings, the Court’s analysis can 5 and should end here.

6 VII. CLAIMS 1–2: PLAINTIFFS’ INVASION OF PRIVACY CLAIMS FAIL TO 7 ALLEGE INTENTIONAL OR “HIGHLY OFFENSIVE” CONDUCT

8 Plaintiffs fail to state an intrusion upon seclusion or invasion of privacy claim. Courts 9 consider these claims together because of the similarities in their analyses. See Hammerling v.
10 Google LLC, 615 F. Supp. 3d 1069, 1088 (N.D. Cal. 2022). To determine whether plaintiffs have 11 sufficiently alleged these claims, courts first ask whether the complaint alleges the defendant 12 “‘intentionally intrude[d], physically or otherwise, upon the solitude or seclusion of another.” 13 Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc., 955 P.2d 469, 490 (Cal. 1998) (emphasis added) (citations 14 omitted). Second, under either theory, courts determine whether the invasion of privacy is 15 “sufficiently serious in nature, scope, and actual or potential impact to constitute an egregious 16 breach of the social norms underlying the privacy right.” Heeger v. Facebook, Inc., 509 F. Supp.
17 3d 1182, 1193 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (emphasis added) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).
18 Plaintiffs cannot satisfy either prong of this analysis because Hilton Holdings’ alleged conduct was 19 (at best) unintentional and falls short of egregious or highly offensive conduct.

20 First, the Complaint does not (and cannot) allege any intentional conduct. Instead, Plaintiffs 21 allege the cookies placed on Plaintiffs’ browsers were the result of defects in the “Opt Out” button 22 rather than intentional conduct by Hilton Holdings. See Compl. ¶ 29 (“Defendant failed to 23 prevent cookies from being transmitted . . .”). For this reason alone, these claims fail because 24 they rely on an alleged error rather than intentional conduct. See Shulman, 955 P.2d at 490 (noting 25 the defendant must have “intentionally intrude[d]”); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury 26 Instruction (CACI) No. 1800; Intrusion into Private Affairs (2025 edition) (“[t]o establish that 27 [defendant] violated [plaintiff’s] right to privacy ... [plaintiff] must prove all of the following: 28 ...2. That [defendant] intentionally intruded.”) (emphasis added).

1 Second, courts routinely reject intrusion upon seclusion and invasion of privacy claims 2 involving website interactions where the plaintiffs do not allege the collection of their private 3 information. As set forth above, see discussion supra Section V, Plaintiffs do not allege they 4 provided any personal information on the Website or that Hilton Holdings collected any private 5 information about them. But even if Plaintiffs had alleged their personal information was involved, 6 the information allegedly collected and disclosed would not be “highly offensive” if intercepted.

7 The Complaint generally alleges “Private Communications” includes browsing history, visit 8 history, website interactions, user input data, demographic information, interests and preferences, 9 shopping behavior, device and user information, geolocation data, session information, and 10 referring URLs. Compl. ¶ 20. Courts have concluded disclosure of each of the data elements 11 identified in the Complaint are not “highly offensive” invasions of privacy. See In re Google, Inc.
12 Privacy Pol’y Litig., 58 F. Supp. 3d 968, 973, 988 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (disclosure of “personal 13 identifying information, browsing habits, search queries, responsiveness to ads, demographic 14 information, declared preferences and other information” not highly offensive); Low v. LinkedIn 15 Corp., 900 F. Supp. 2d 1010, 1025 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (same for browsing history); Hammerling, 615 16 F. Supp. 3d at 1089 (same for geolocation information); In re iPhone Application Litig., 844 F.
17 Supp. 2d 1040, 1063 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (same for unique device identification number, geolocation 18 information); see also Cousin v. Sharp Healthcare, 681 F. Supp. 3d 1117, 1123 (S.D. Cal. 2023) 19 (disclosure of data about plaintiffs’ use of the “website to ‘research . . . doctors,’ ‘look for providers,’ 20 and ‘search for medical specialists’” was not highly offensive because ‘nothing about [the] 21 information relates specifically to plaintiffs’ health’”). “Even disclosure of very personal 22 information”—which is not present here—“has not been deemed an egregious breach of social 23 norms sufficient to establish a constitutional right to privacy.” In re Yahoo Mail Litig., 7 F. Supp.
24 3d 1016, 1038 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Therefore, 25 Plaintiffs fail to satisfy either prong of the combined inquiry, and each claim fails and should be 26 dismissed.

28 /////

VIII. CLAIMS 3–4: PLAINTIFFS’ CIPA CLAIMS FAIL TO ALLEGE INTENT OR CONTENTS OF COMMUNICATIONS, AND CONTAIN OTHER DEFICIENCIES

A. The Section 631(a) Wiretapping Claim Fails to Allege the Contents of Plaintiffs’ Communications or Intent to Commit an Unlawful Wiretap

Plaintiffs fail to state a wiretapping claim under Section 631(a) of CIPA. Section 631(a) prohibits “three distinct and mutually independent patterns of conduct: [(1)] intentional wiretapping, [(2)] wilfully attempting to learn the contents or meaning of a communication in transit over a wire, and [(3)] attempting to use or communicate information obtained as a result of engaging in either of the previous two activities.” Tavernetti v. Superior Ct., 583 P.2d 737, 741 (Cal. 1978). A “fourth basis for liability” exists for anyone who “aids, agrees with, employs, or conspires with any person or persons to unlawfully do, or permit, or cause to be done” any of the other three 631(a) bases for liability. Cal. Penal Code § 631(a); Mastel v. Miniclip SA, 549 F. Supp. 3d 1129, 1134 (E.D. Cal. 2021). Plaintiffs fail to plead a violation of any of the four clauses.

1. Plaintiffs cannot state a claim under section 631(a)’s first three clauses

To the extent Plaintiffs plead a violation of the first three clauses, Plaintiffs’ claim fails as a matter of law.

Clause 1: The “overwhelming weight of authority” limits the first clause of Section 631(a) to its plain text—i.e., “telegraph[s] or telephone wire[s].” Cal. Penal Code § 631(a); Mastel, 549 F. Supp. 3d at 1135 (holding the first clause is inapplicable to wiretapping via the Internet, including wiretapping on a smartphone’s mobile web browser). It is inconsequential that Plaintiffs (vaguely) allege they visited the Website on a “device.” See, e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 79, 87, 95. Doing so does not bring the communications within the scope of the first clause, and there is no basis for liability. See Mastel, 549 F. Supp. 3d at 1135 (rejecting argument that a “tool or device” exclusive to iPhones qualifies as a “telephone instrument” under the first clause).

Clause 2: Hilton Holdings cannot be liable under the second clause because Plaintiffs allege Hilton Holdings “owns and operates” the Website. Compl. ¶ 22. Hilton Holding is therefore a party to the communication. “[I]t is established that a party to the communication

1 cannot be liable for recording its own conversations under § 631(a).” Swarts v. Home Depot, Inc., 2 689 F. Supp. 3d 732, 744 (N.D. Cal. 2023).

3 Moreover, Plaintiffs fail to allege their visits to the Website involved the interception of 4 the “contents” of their communications, as required under the second clause. Under Section 5 631(a), the “contents” of a communication means “the substance, purport or meaning of [the] 6 communication”—i.e., the “intended message conveyed by the communication,” which is distinct 7 from “record information regarding the characteristics of the message that is generated in the 8 course of [that] communication.” In re Zynga Priv. Litig., 750 F.3d 1098, 1106 (9th Cir. 2014); 9 Graham v. Noom, Inc., 533 F. Supp. 3d 823, 833 (N.D. Cal. 2021). Non-actionable “record 10 information” includes “webpage titles, webpage keywords, the date and times of website visits, 11 IP addresses, page visits, purchase intent signals, and add-to-cart actions.” Katz-Lacabe v. Oracle 12 Am., Inc., 668 F. Supp. 3d 928, 945 n.9 (N.D. Cal. 2023).

13 While Plaintiffs allege several types of “record information” are transmitted to third 14 parties through interactions on the Website, they do not allege the “contents” of their 15 communications were ever intercepted. Plaintiffs also do not allege they ever inputted data by 16 completing form fields or that they conducted searches on the Website that could include the 17 “contents” of their communications. Plaintiffs merely allege they selected the “Opt Out” button 18 on the banner and then browsed the Website. Compl. ¶¶ 76-77, 84-85, 92-93. That is not enough.

19 A court “will not assume out of whole cloth what the contents of any communications 20 were.” Heiting v. Taro Pharms. USA, 709 F. Supp. 3d 1007, 1018, 1021 (C.D. Cal. 2023)
21 (granting motion to dismiss). For example, in Mikulsky v. Bloomingdale’s, LLC, the court granted 22 a motion to dismiss similar website wiretapping claims finding that allegations the website 23 operator intercepted “interactions” with the website were not sufficient to allege “contents” of 24 communications within the purview of California’s wiretapping statute. 713 F. Supp. 3d 833, 25 845 (S.D. Cal. 2024); see also Katz-Lacabe, 668 F. Supp. 3d at 944 (recognizing that “[o]f the 26 nine types of information that Plaintiffs allege were captured [by cookies], only two . . . (1) 27 referrer URLs; and (2) data entered into form fields” potentially implicated liability under section 28 631(a)). Here, the absence of “allegations describing the content of those conversations” dooms

1 Plaintiffs’ wiretapping claim. See In re Google Assistant Priv. Litig., 457 F. Supp. 3d 797, 833
2 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (dismissing breach of contract claims and noting generic allegations provided 3 “no basis upon which to infer that Plaintiffs’ ‘sensitive personal information’ is implicated”).

4 Therefore, Plaintiffs’ allegations fail to plausibly allege Hilton Holdings is liable under 5 the second clause.

6 Clause 3: Section 631(a)’s third clause is derivative of the first two and necessarily fails 7 here as a matter of law. See In re Google Assistant Privacy Litig., 457 F. Supp. 3d 797, 827 (N.D.
8 Cal. 2020) (“Plaintiffs must establish that the information at issue . . . was obtained through a 9 violation of the first or second clauses. Because [p]laintiffs have not done so, they also have failed 10 to plead a violation of the third clause of § 631(a).”).

11 2. Plaintiffs fail to allege aiding and abetting liability under the fourth clause

12 The fourth clause of 631(a) applies when a defendant “aids, agrees with, employs, or 13 conspires with any person or persons to unlawfully do, or permit, or cause to be done any of the 14 acts or things mentioned above this section.” Cal. Penal Code § 631(a). To be liable under the 15 fourth clause, Plaintiffs must allege that Hilton Holdings had “both knowledge of the conduct that 16 will violate the statute and a purpose of aiding, agreeing with, or employing the third party to 17 commit those acts.” Smith v. YETI Coolers, LLC, 2024 WL 4539578, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 18 2024) (emphasis added).

19 Hilton had no intent to unlawfully wiretap: First, to the extent Plaintiffs allege Hilton 20 Holdings had a purpose to violate section 631(a), their allegations are insufficient. For example, 21 in Esparza v. UAG Escondido AI Inc., the plaintiff alleged that the defendant car dealership was 22 liable under Section 631(a) on an aiding and abetting liability theory because the dealer embedded 23 a third-party’s chat software onto its website. See 2024 WL 559241, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 12, 24 2024). The court held that simply alleging a website operator knowingly implemented certain 25 software on its website was insufficient to establish aiding and abetting liability under clause four.
26 Id. at *6; see also Smith v. YETI Coolers, LLC, 2025 WL 877127, *1 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2025) 27 (granting motion to dismiss and finding allegations that the defendant knew third party software 28 was placed on its website to “collect[] consumers’ sensitive information” were “insufficient to

1 support a plausible inference that [d]efendant knowingly agreed with or employed [the software 2 provider] to engage in conduct that violated the wiretapping statute.”).

3 Likewise, Plaintiffs here allege that Defendant willfully aided and abetted Third Parties 4 “[b]y configuring the Website . . . in [a] manner” that it “caused Plaintiffs’ [] browsers to store 5 the Third Parties’ cookies and to transmit those cookies alongside Private Communications . . . to 6 the Third Parties without Plaintiff[s]’ and Class members’ consent.” Compl. ¶ 142. However, 7 Plaintiffs also allege that Hilton Holdings used a Cookie Banner to affirmatively disclose cookies 8 and provide options to customize the Website experience. See Compl. ¶ 1. Plaintiffs’ allegations, 9 accepted as true, indicate Hilton did not intend to aid the surreptitious collection of 10 communications. At best, the Complaint suggests that the alleged failure of the “Opt Out” button 11 was a good faith mistake rather than Hilton Holdings’ intentional conduct.

12 The “Third Parties” had no intent to unlawfully wiretap: Second, in any event, Plaintiffs 13 have failed to plead that the “Third Parties” have the predicate liability necessary for an aiding 14 and abetting claim. As set forth above, the first clause of section 631(a) fails as a matter of law 15 when applied to internet communications. Further, there is no underlying violation of the second 16 clause because the “Third Parties” lack the requisite intent.

17 Alleging a website operator allows third-party cookies to operate on its website does not 18 plausibly allege that those third parties intended to commit an unlawful wiretap. Indeed, courts 19 have rejected similar allegations. See, e.g., B.K. v. Desert Care Network., 2024 WL 5338587, at 20 *3 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 22, 2024) (rejecting arguments that Meta “intentionally received and used user 21 data” from the defendants because plaintiffs “d[id] not allege that Meta knew or should have 22 known that the data it received from [d]efendants was collected without users’ consent”). In 23 Wilson v. Google LLC, this Court recently confirmed this approach, denying a motion to dismiss 24 where the complaint alleged the defendant “intentionally encourage[d]’ website operators to use 25 its tools in a way that circumvents users’ privacy settings.” 2025 WL 901941, at *6 (N.D. Cal.
26 Mar. 25, 2025). Those allegations are nothing like the unintentional malfunction alleged here.
27 Therefore, Plaintiffs fail to state a claim for aiding and abetting liability under the fourth clause.
28 Their section 631(a) wiretapping claim fails.

1 B. Plaintiffs’ Section 638.51 Pen Register Claim Fails Because It Does Not Apply
2 to the Internet and, Regardless, Statutory Exclusions Apply

3 Pen registers are devices law enforcement physically install to track every outbound 4 number that a telephone dials, and trap and trace devices record every inbound number that a 5 telephone receives by using electronic impulses to reveal the telephone number. See Smith v.
6 Maryland, 442 U.S. 735, 736 n.1 (1979); United States v. Gonzalez, Inc., 412 F.3d 1102, 1112 7 (9th Cir. 2005), amended on denial of reh’g, 437 F.3d 854 (9th Cir. 2006). Plaintiffs allege that 8 the third-party “cookies and the corresponding software code” each constitute “pen registers” 9 because those cookies captured “the IP address and user-agent information” from Plaintiffs’ 10 computers. Compl. ¶ 155. This novel theory fails for numerous reasons.

11 Plain Language: In 2015, the California Legislature enacted Section 638.51 and its 12 accompanying statutes through A.B. 929 to allow California law enforcement agencies to obtain 13 authorization to install pen register or trap and trace devices without running afoul of state law.
14 See Request for Judicial Notice (“RJN”), Declaration of Matthew C. Danaher (“Danaher Decl.”), 15 Ex. A, Stats. 2015, Ch. 204, Sec. 2 (“An Act to add Sections 638.50, 638.51, 638.52, and 638.53 16 to the Penal Code”) (“A.B. 929”). The plain language of California’s pen register statutes limits 17 their application to telephones. Among other requirements, a court order authorizing the use of a 18 pen register or trap and trace device must specify the identity of the person “in whose name . . .
19 the telephone line to which the pen register or trap and trace device is to be attached,” and the 20 number and location of the “telephone line” to which the pen register or trap and trace device 21 would be attached. Cal. Penal Code § 638.52(d)(1), (3) (emphasis added). Moreover, section 22 638.52, also enacted as part of A.B. 929, provides that information acquired pursuant to a pen 23 register or trap and trace device may only disclose location information “to the extent that the 24 location may be determined from the telephone number.” Cal. Penal Code § 638.52(c) (emphasis 25 added).

26 Thus, the plain language of A.B. 929 confirms it applies only to telephone numbers, not 27 software that captures an IP address.

28 ////

1 Legislative History: A.B. 929’s legislative history underscores that the California 2 legislature did not intend the statutes to apply to websites collecting IP addresses. A.B. 929 does 3 not mention IP addresses or imply IP addresses are within the bill’s purview. See RJN, Danaher 4 Decl., Ex. B, Senate Committee on Public Safety Analysis of California Assembly Bill 929, 5 California 2015-2016 Regular Session (June 16, 2015). Instead, the Legislative Counsel’s Digest 6 preceding the bill states that A.B. 929 “would clarify that any location information obtained by a 7 pen register or a tra[p] and trace device is limited to the information that can be determined from 8 the telephone number.” RJN, Danaher Decl., Ex. A, at 1 (emphasis added); see also Danaher 9 Decl. Ex. B, at 11 (“Pen registers and track and trace devices generally track incoming and 10 outgoing telephone calls.”) (emphasis added). The legislative history does not suggest the bill 11 was intended to apply to websites or the collection of IP addresses or “user-agent information.” 12 And, given that A.B. 929 was enacted in 2015, there can be no plausible argument that the 13 Legislature was unaware of IP addresses or internet communications when it passed the law.
14 Plaintiffs’ invocation of CIPA’s preamble language regarding “new devices and techniques” does 15 not extend the statutes beyond telephones and rings hollow here. Compl. ¶ 152.

16 Plaintiffs Plead These Tools Generally Capture Contents: In any event, Plaintiffs’ 17 generalized wiretapping allegations defeat their specific pen register claim. The pen register 18 statutes define a “pen register” as “a device or process that records or decodes dialing, routing, 19 addressing, or signaling information transmitted by an instrument or facility from which a wire 20 or electronic communication is transmitted, but not the contents of a communication.” Cal. Penal 21 Code § 638.50(b) (emphasis added). As set forth above, Plaintiffs’ wiretapping claims fail 22 because they don’t allege intentional conduct or that their contents of communications were 23 intercepted. By pleading that “some” contents of communications are intercepted, Plaintiffs also 24 plead themselves out of a pen register claim. The pen register statutes have no language or 25 exception for when “some of the information” is the contents of the communication. See Cal.
26 Penal Code §§ 638.50-53. Here, Plaintiffs allege “[s]ome of the information collected” by third 27 party cookies on the Website “does not constitute the content of Plaintiffs’ [] communications.” 28 Compl. ¶ 157 (emphasis added). Thus, Plaintiffs’ pen register claim fails because the cookies on the Website they allege generally collect some contents of communications cannot, by definition, be pen registers.

For these reasons, the Court should dismiss Plaintiffs' Section 638.51 claim.

IX. CLAIMS 5-8: PLAINTIFFS' FRAUD, CONTRACT, AND QUASI-CONTRACT CLAIMS FAIL TO ALLEGE DAMAGES AND SUFFER FURTHER DEFICIENCIES

A. Claims 5, 7, 8 Fail for Lack of Damages

Plaintiffs' claims for common law fraud, deceit and/or misrepresentation (Claim Five), breach of contract (Claim Seven), and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Claim Eight) each fail because they do not allege actual damages. See Fladeboe v. Am. Isuzu Motors Inc., 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 225, 243 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007) ("[A] defrauded party is ordinarily limited to recovering out-of-pocket damages.") (citation omitted); Ruiz v. Gap, Inc., 380 F. App'x 689, 692 (9th Cir. 2010) (rejecting nominal damages argument and noting "a breach of contract claim requires a showing of appreciable and actual damage."); Bennett v. Ohio Nat'l Life Assurance Corp., 309 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 784 (Cal. Ct. App. 2023) ("[B]reach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, i.e., bad faith, include[s] a damages element.").

Plaintiffs' damages allegations under their fraud claim boil down to "diminution of the value of their private and personally identifiable information and communications." Compl. ¶ 167. Under their breach of contract and implied covenant claims, Plaintiffs allege that they "were damaged in an amount at least equal to the difference in value between that which was promised and Defendant's partial, deficient, and/or defective performance." Compl. ¶¶ 190, 201. Plaintiffs do not allege they intended to participate in a market for their data or paid for some service for which they did not receive full value.

In similar cases, courts resoundingly conclude these allegations fail to plausibly allege damages. For example, in Hubbard v. Google LLC, the plaintiffs alleged that Google collected and used data from YouTube users to generate advertising revenue, that "there is a market for consumers to monetize Personal Information," and that "published analyses and studies have placed a value in excess of $200 on an individual's Personal Information." 2024 WL 3302066,

1 at *9 (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2024). The court nonetheless found that “Plaintiffs do not allege sufficient 2 facts from which the Court may reasonably infer that Defendants’ misappropriation reduced the 3 value of Plaintiffs’ information” and an “explanation as to how does not appear so obvious that 4 the Court may simply infer one.” Id.; see also Griffith v. Tiktok, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 3d 963, 978 5 (C.D. Cal. 2023) (“In the absence of allegations that [p]laintiff incurred actual financial losses, 6 for example because she wished to sell her browsing data but was unable to do so or would be 7 paid less for the data, she has not plausibly alleged economic injury.”).

8 Likewise, Plaintiffs do not allege they paid money to browse the Website. “[A] benefit of 9 the bargain measure of damages is intended to give the injured party the benefit of his bargain 10 and insofar as possible to place him in the same position he would have been in had the promisor 11 performed the contract.” In re Google Assistant Privacy Litig., 457 F. Supp. 3d 797, 833 (N.D.
12 Cal. 2020) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted) (rejecting plaintiffs’ benefit of the 13 bargain theory because “the FAC fails to allege that Plaintiffs actually provided consideration for 14 the security services which they claim were not provided”). Because Plaintiffs do not allege they 15 paid anything to browse the Website, they have not adequately alleged damages to support their 16 fraud, breach of contract, and breach of implied covenant claims. These claims should be 17 dismissed.

18 B. Plaintiffs’ Equitable Claims and Remedies are Foreclosed by *Sonner

19 “To obtain any equitable relief in federal court, a plaintiff must allege that they lack an 20 adequate remedy at law.” Hubbard, 2024 WL 3302066, at *4 (citing Sonner v. Premier Nutrition 21 Corp., 971 F.3d 834, 844 (9th Cir. 2020)). The Hubbard court held that “Plaintiffs’ allegations 22 of harm focus on economic injuries already suffered,” “Plaintiffs do seek damages to remedy their 23 harm,” and “the legal remedy of damages should serve as an adequate form of retrospective relief 24 for such harm.” Id. at *4-6 (dismissing “all of Plaintiffs’ requests for equitable relief,” including 25 for injunctive relief, restitution, audit and accounting, and disgorgement of profits, and “all of 26 their claims for unjust enrichment.”). “[W]here the unjust enrichment claim relies upon the same 27 factual predicates as a plaintiff’s legal causes of action, it is not a true alternative theory of relief 28 but rather is duplicative of those legal causes of action.” Id. at *6 (citation omitted).

1 Here, Plaintiffs have not pled that they lack an adequate remedy at law, and, like in 2 Hubbard, seek damages for alleged injuries they already suffered. See Compl. ¶¶ 118, 129, 148, 3 160, 172, and 191. Plaintiffs “rel[y] on ‘the same factual predicates’” under their unjust 4 enrichment claim as alleged under their fraud, deception, and/or misrepresentation claims, for 5 which they allege an adequate legal remedy exists. Compare Compl. ¶ 175 (“Defendant created 6 and implemented a scheme to increase its own profits through a pervasive pattern of false 7 statements and fraudulent omissions.”) with id. ¶ 163 (“Defendant fraudulently and deceptively 8 informed Plaintiffs and Class members that they could ‘Opt Out’ of cookies.”) and ¶ 165 9 (“Defendant also gained financially from, and as a result of, its breach.”). Under Sonner and its 10 progeny, Plaintiffs’ unjust enrichment claim and all requests for equitable relief—including the 11 Prayer for “[a]n order for full restitution,” “[a]n order requiring Defendant to disgorge revenues 12 and profits wrongfully obtained,” and “[a]n order temporarily and permanently enjoining 13 Defendant from continuing the unlawful, deceptive, fraudulent, and unfair business practices 14 alleged in this Complaint”—are foreclosed and should be dismissed. Compl. Prayer ¶¶ E, F, G.

15 C. Plaintiffs’ Unjust Enrichment Claim is Duplicative of the Contract Claim

16 “Under California law, unjust enrichment is an action in quasi-contract.” Gerlinger v.
17 Amazon.Com, Inc., 311 F. Supp. 2d 838, 856 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (citing Paracor Fin. v. Gen. Elec.
18 Capital Corp., 96 F.3d 1151, 1167 (9th Cir.1996)). “An action based on quasi-contract cannot 19 lie where a valid express contract covering the same subject matter exists between the parties.” 20 Id.

21 Plaintiffs allege the existence of a contract and rely on the language of that alleged contract 22 as the basis for their unjust enrichment claims. Compare Compl. ¶ 176 (under claim for unjust 23 enrichment) (“Defendant was unjustly enriched . . . through its misrepresentation that users could 24 “Opt Out” of cookies) with id. ¶ 186 (under claim for breach of contract) (“The Website’s Privacy 25 Statement contains enforceable promises that Defendant made to Plaintiffs [] including, . . . If you 26 would like to opt out of the sale of your personal information, you may do so by clicking on the 27 banner. . . .”). “Accordingly, a valid express contract covering the same subject matter exists 28 between the parties, and therefore an action in quasi-contract is inappropriate.” Gerlinger v.

1 Amazon.Com, Inc., 311 F. Supp. 2d at 856 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (holding that Plaintiffs cannot plead 2 unjust enrichment in the alternative when they rely on contract).

3 D. Plaintiffs' Breach of Implied Covenant Claim is Superfluous

4 “If the allegations in a breach of implied covenant claim do not go beyond the statement of 5 a mere contract breach and, relying on the same alleged acts, simply seek the same damages or 6 other relief already claimed in a companion contract cause of action, they may be disregarded as 7 superfluous as no additional claim is actually stated.” Zepeda v. PayPal, Inc., 777 F. Supp. 2d 8 1215, 1221 (N.D. Cal. 2011). Here, for their breach of contract and implied covenant claims, 9 Plaintiffs allege that “Defendant’s relationship with its users is governed by the Website’s Privacy 10 Statement,” quote the same provisions from that alleged contract, regurgitate the same word-for-11 word allegations in support of breach, and seek the same relief. Compare Compl. ¶ 185 with id.
12 ¶ 193, id. ¶ 187 with id. ¶ 195, and id. ¶ 191 with id. ¶ 202. Since Plaintiffs’ allegations in support 13 for their claims for breach of the implied covenant and breach of contract are the same, the implied 14 covenant claim must be dismissed.

15 E. Plaintiffs Do Not Adequately Plead the Requisite Knowledge or Intent to 16 Support their Fraud Claim

17 Under California law, the elements of common law fraud are “misrepresentation, 18 knowledge of its falsity, intent to defraud, justifiable reliance and resulting damage.” Helm v.
19 Alderwoods Grp., Inc., 696 F. Supp. 2d 1057, 1079 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (emphasis added). Rule 20 9(b) requires these elements “must be pled with sufficient particularity.” Id. at 1079-80 (N.D.
21 Cal. 2009). Thus, under Rule 9(b), Plaintiffs must plead specific “facts demonstrating that 22 defendants knew the statements were false when they made them.” Id. at 1080 (dismissing fraud 23 claims).

24 Plaintiffs here allege that the misrepresentations about the ability to “opt out” of certain 25 cookies were “known exclusively to, and actively concealed by Defendant . . . at the time they 26 were made. Defendant knew, or should have known, how the Website functioned . . . and the 27 third-party cookies in use on the Website, through testing the Website, evaluating its performance 28 metrics . . . or otherwise, and knew, or should have known, that the Website’s programming

1 allowed the third-party cookies to be placed. . . .” Compl. ¶ 165 (emphasis added). Plaintiffs do 2 not allege any specific facts to show that Hilton Holdings knew that the alleged statements were 3 false aside from a vague and speculative reference to “testing” of the Website—and the remaining 4 allegations suggest only that Hilton Holdings should have known—which does not amount to the 5 requisite knowledge. Further, Plaintiffs fail to make any allegation that Defendant intended to 6 defraud them. Just as Plaintiffs’ wiretapping and trespass claims suggest only a mistake (see 7 discussion supra section VIII.A.2 and infra section X), so too here the allegations do not support 8 an inference of knowledge of falsity or intent to deceive. The fraud claim should be dismissed 9 on this additional basis.

10 X. CLAIM 9: THE TRESPASS TO CHATTELS CLAIM FAILS TO ALLEGE 11 INTENTIONAL CONDUCT OR SIGNIFICANT INTERFERENCE WITH 12 POSSESSION

13 Plaintiffs’ trespass to chattels claim similarly fails. “Under California law, trespass to chattels 14 ‘lies where an intentional interference with the possession of personal property’ causes injury.” 15 Best Carpet Values, Inc. v. Google, LLC, 90 F.4th 962, 968 (9th Cir. 2024) (emphasis added)
16 (quoting Intel Corp. v. Hamidi, 71 P.3d 296, 302 (Cal. 2003)). As set forth by the California 17 Supreme Court in Intel Corp. v. Hamidi, “[u]nder California law, decisions finding electronic 18 contact to be a trespass to computer systems have generally involved some actual or threatened 19 interference with the computers’ functioning.” Doe I v. Google LLC, 741 F. Supp. 3d 828, 846 20 (N.D. Cal. 2024) (internal quotation marks omitted) (citing Hamidi, 71 P.3d at 926). Accordingly, 21 a plaintiff must plead their harm rises to “a significant reduction in service constituting an 22 interference with the intended functioning of the system, which is necessary to establish a cause of 23 action for trespass.” In re iPhone Application Litig., 844 F. Supp. 2d 1040, 1069 (N.D. Cal. 2012).

24 Here, Plaintiffs’ trespass to chattels claim alleges that Hilton Holdings “intentionally caused 25 third party software code to be stored” on Plaintiffs’ devices which “interfered” with Plaintiffs’ 26 ability to use their devices. Compl. ¶ 206. Just as Plaintiffs’ wiretapping claims blame a mistake 27 and not intentional conduct (see supra section VIII.A.2), here too the conclusory allegations of 28 “intent” are belied by the allegation that cookies were placed on Plaintiffs’ browsers in error. See

1 Compl. ¶ 29 (“Defendant failed to prevent cookies from being transmitted . . .”). Courts do not 2 have to “accept as true allegations . . . that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, 3 or unreasonable inferences.” Daniels-Hall, 629 F.3d at 998.

4 The Complaint also fails to explain how Hilton Holdings’ alleged conduct caused “a 5 significant reduction in service” of Plaintiffs’ devices. In re iPhone Application Litig., 844 F.
6 Supp. 2d at 1069. The Complaint makes only conclusory allegations claiming Plaintiffs 7 experienced a “loss in value” and “[r]eduction of storage, disk space, and performance” of their 8 devices (Compl. ¶ 207), but these vague claims do not constitute the “significant reduction in 9 service” necessary to state a trespass to chattels claim. In re iPhone Application Litig., 844 F.
10 Supp. 2d at 1069. Since Intel, courts have routinely rejected similar claims when there are no 11 allegations regarding a “significant reduction in service constituting an interference.” Casillas v.
12 Berkshire Hathaway Homestate Ins. Co., 294 Cal. Rptr. 3d 841, 849 (Cal. Ct. App. 2022) 13 (collecting cases); see, e.g., Yunker v. Pandora Media, Inc., 2013 WL 1282980, at *16 (N.D. Cal.
14 Mar. 26, 2013) (dismissing claim because allegation that defendant “installed unwanted code that 15 consumes portions of the memory on [plaintiff’s] mobile device” failed to state a trespass to 16 chattels claim). This is because “Intel implied that trespass to chattels would not lie to protect 17 interests in privacy[.]” Casillas, 294 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 848.

18 Plaintiffs’ allegations resemble those recently rejected in this District. In Doe I v. Google
19 LLC, the plaintiffs brought a trespass claim “based on the alleged intrusion of Google source code 20 onto the plaintiffs’ computing devices when they visit[ed] their healthcare providers’ websites.” 21 Doe, 741 F. Supp. 3d at 846 (Chhabria, J.). The court reasoned that “nothing about the source code 22 or the existence of cookies physically impairs the functioning of the plaintiffs’ computing devices.” 23 Id. So too here. Plaintiffs have failed to allege that the cookies—which are merely “small text 24 files” (Compl. ¶ 17) ubiquitous on the Internet—“physically impair[ed] the functioning” of 25 Plaintiffs’ devices. Therefore, Plaintiffs’ trespass to chattels claim should be dismissed.

26 XI. CONCLUSION

27 For the reasons stated, Hilton Holdings respectfully requests that the Court grant its Motion 28 to Dismiss Plaintiffs’ Complaint in its entirety with prejudice.
